From Chancellor Kent's Eulogy on the author.

"The American Dictionary of the English Language, is a work of prefound investigation, and does infinite honor to the philological learning and general literature of this country. Happy the man who can thus honorably identify his name with the existence of our vertacular tongue. There is no other, way in which mortal man could more effectually secure immortality beneath the skies. Obelisks, arches, and triumphal monuments seem to be as transient as the bubble of military reputation. No work of art can withstand the incessant strokes of time. The unriwither and the incessant strokes of time. The universaled Parthenon, glowing in polished marble, and which, for more than two thousand years continued from the summit of the citadel of Attena to cast its broad splendors across the plains below, and along the coasts and headlands of Attica, is now crumbling to ruins, after being despoiled of its most exquisie materials by savage war and heartless man.— Even the Pyramids of Egypt, whose origin is hidden in the deepest recesses of antiquity, and which have always stood in awe-inspiring solitude and grandeur, are now amonyed by the depredations of curiosity, and greatly corroded by the action of the elements, and gradually sinking under the encroaching sands of the desert. This dictionary; and the language which it embodies will also perish; but it will not be with the gorgeous palaces. It will go with the solemn temples and the great globe itself."

The Publishers of the foregoing work respectfully The rublishers of the foregoing work respectivity amounce that they have made arrangements with Mr. F. Taylor, Bookseller, of Washington city, to furnish the American Dictionary, in two large volumes, at the very reduced price of twelve dollars.

It is to be understood that for this price the best paper and type, and the best binding, will be supplied—the best copies, that is to say, in all respects.

The very valuable aumolement, which is contained.

The very valuable supplement, which is contained in no other edition than the present one, should not be passed unnoticed; it contains four thousand words, not given in any other dictionary; was only completed by Dr. Webster in 1843, immediately before the sickness which terminated his valuable life, and has been published and copy-righted, since his death, by piete state, it is not to be supposed that any thing more can or will be added to it; the present edition de-fining and illustrating twenty thousand more words than the edition which, when it first issued from the hands of Dr. Webster, was acknowledged by the Engli-h philologists to be the best dictionary in the world.

For publishing in the City of Washington, a Demo Newspaper, to be called "THE CONSTITUTION."

THE CONSTITUTION."

The Spectator, will issue, on or before the 10th inst. the first number of a new paper to be called "The Constitution." It will be devoted to the steady advocacy of that system of measures which will preserve unimpaired the sacred instrument from which we borrow the name; and as constantly oppose whatever is not sanctioned by it. We ment from which we borrow the name; and as constantly oppose whatever is not sanctioned by it. We shall unceasingly oppose a National Bank—a Protective Tariff—Internal Improvement by the General Government—a Distribution of the Proceeds of the sales of the Public Landa—Assumption of the State Debts—an abrogation of the Executive Veto, as unconstitutional and inexpedient.

We hope to make the paper worthy of the confidence and support of the Democratic party. It shall be the faithful expositor of their principles, and the ever ready medium to convey their sentiments and wishes to the public. The Democratic cause, is the cause of troth and justice. It courts the light. It wisnes to the public. The Democratic cause, is the cause of truth and justice. It courts the light I shuns no investigation. And we are determined to see whether a paper, conducted with a devotion of the principles, rather than to the men, of our party—to further the great cause of human progress. THE WINTER SESSION of six month will to further the great cause of human progress, rather than the mere advancement of particular individuals, will not commend itself to the confidence and favor of thepeople.

As soon as the all engrossing topics of the elections

As soon as the all engrossing topics of the electrons are over, we shall devote a liberal portion of our columns to subjects of general literature and science; endeavoring to present such matter as will amuse, instruct, and edify.
